Learner Information

Students are often asked to write essays to express an opinion about something.

Think about a topic about which you could write a short essay explaining why you like or dislike something. This topic should allow you to write about two or three things you like or dislike, and explain or support your reasoning. For example, you may choose to write about a job you have had, a class you have taken, a sports team you have followed, or a political or community event you are involved in.

Work Sheet

Task 1: Using the topic you have chosen, brainstorm ideas you could write about. Before you start writing your essay, jot down some of your ideas here.

Answer:

Task 2: Write down at least two reasons to support your opinions. Jot down as many details as you can to support each reason.

Answer:

Task 3: Organize these ideas into a rough draft of your essay. You may do this on paper or using a word processing program on the computer. Include an introductory paragraph, a concluding paragraph, and at least two well-developed paragraphs in the body of the essay. There should be at least four paragraphs in total.

Answer:

Task 4: Read your draft essay to someone else (e.g. your instructor or another learner) and ask for feedback. Ask them if your essay makes sense and if they have any suggestions for improvement.
